From the Desk of the CEO

Rod Burkett

A few weeks ago, I participated in a Congressional Briefing event in Washington, DC, sponsored by the National Center for Assisted Living. I have attended several of these programs before, but it hasn't been held over the past two years due to the COVID pandemic. During this event we make organized visits over a couple of days to our various elected officials to discuss the challenges and successes of our Assisted living industry, and provide advice on how our members of Congress could assist us and better serve our residents and other stakeholders.

While walking thru the Capitol building and grounds, I remembered back to my first time being there as a fresh-faced, goofy 18-year old on my senior class trip. That was 48 years earlier. To further frame the timeline, President Nixon resigned 4 months after our visit, although I don't think our tour of the White House had anything to do with his upcoming departure. I wondered how I had changed during these past 5 decades, and how our country had also changed.

I think I'm more knowledgeable now about people, places and things. Next, I considered if I have transformed that knowledge into more wisdom and understanding about people, places, and things. Many days, I question my progress on that wisdom/understanding journey, and like most people I know, the answer is a mixed bag. I feel I have some level of success, while still being a fallible, messy human being, but so far, I'm still interested in making the effort to keep trying to figure it out.

So, how has our country changed over the same period? The USA is definitely more knowledgeable about people, places, and things, but what's our collective wisdom and understanding level? I would say that the answer is also a mixed bag. We've made great strides in many areas in nurturing our collective similarities and our differences, but our current state of polarization is not serving us well. It seems in today's world, when we have different opinions, we spend way too much energy trying to prove the other wrong, instead of looking for the positives that come from honoring all viewpoints. Our democracy, just like people, can be fallible and messy, as we connect with each other.

From what I saw in DC recently, while not a perfect process, most involved are still willing to keep trying to figure out the best way forward.

IN THE NEWS

All About July
Rick Banas

All Hail! July is named after Julius Caesar.

In the northern hemisphere, July is usually the hottest month of the year. The hottest temperature ever recorded in the United States was on July 10, 1913, in Death Valley, California. The temperature reached 134 degrees. By contrast, in the southern half of the world, the temperature fell to 128.6 degrees below zero at Vostok Station in Antarctica in July 1983.

What are often referred to as the Dog Days of Summer begin on July 3 and end on Aug. 11.

On July 1, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed the first federal income tax legislation, which called for a tax of 3% on annual incomes of $600 to $10,000 and 5% on incomes above $10,000. An Act of Congress also established the Internal Revenue Bureau. Taxes began being withheld from paychecks on July 1, 1943.

The Lawrence Welk Show premiered on television on July 2, 1955. Dick Clark hosted American Bandstand for the first time on July 9, 1956.

Sam Walton opened the first WalMart in Rogers, Arkansas, in July 1962.

In July, we celebrate National Blueberry, Hot Dog, Picnic, Pickle, Ice Cream, and Watermelon Month.

Did you know that in addition to being a tasty treat, watermelons are a good source of Vitamins A and Vitamins C. They contain lycopene, fiber, and potassium. Watermelons also are more than 90% water so eating watermelon can help you stay hydrated.

Some other interesting facts about watermelon include:

- More than 1,200 varieties of watermelon are grown worldwide.
- Every part of the watermelon is edible, even the seeds and the rind.
- Early explorers used watermelons as canteens.
- Watermelons do not contain any fat or cholesterol.
- Watermelon reportedly can help quench the inflammation that contributes to such conditions as asthma, atherosclerosis, diabetes, colon cancer, and arthritis.
- Watermelons are a vegetable. They are related to cucumbers, pumpkins, and squash.

Talk about unusual celebrations. July 27 is Take Your Houseplant for a Walk Day.

WELLNESS

Can I Fill Your Cup?

Meghann Giarraputo MSN, RN

Water is necessary to not only survive, but also to thrive. Our body depends on water to function. The Centers for Disease Control & Prevention (CDC) notes that water helps our bodies to keep a normal temperature, it lubricates and cushions our joints, it protects our spinal cord and other sensitive tissues, and it helps us get rid of wastes through urination, perspiration, and bowel movements. Moreover, the National Institute on Aging (NIA, 2019) shares that water also helps us absorb nutrients. Our bodies require increased amounts of water at times such as: during the warmer months, when we are more physically active, when we are fighting an infection or running a fever. All in all, hydration effects our bodies both physically and mentally.

In addition to water being found in liquids, including its natural state, water can be found in solids as well. For example, many fruits (ex: watermelon, strawberries, cantaloupe, tomatoes) and vegetables (ex: cucumber, lettuce, celery, zucchini) have high water content.

As we age, our sense of thirst diminishes. It is critical that we help our bodies stay healthy and hydrated through continued intentional efforts. The National Institute on Aging (NIA) (2019) includes the following tips to stay hydrated:

- Don't wait until you feel thirsty to drink water or other fluids.
- Take sips of water, milk, or juice between bites during meals.
- Add liquids throughout the day.
- Have a cup of low-fat soup as an afternoon snack.
- Drink a full glass of water when you take medicine.
- Have a glass of water before you exercise.
- Drink fat-free or low-fat milk, or other drinks without added sugars.
- If you drink alcoholic beverages, do so sensibly and in moderation. That means up to one drink per day for women and up to two drinks for men.
- Don't stop drinking liquids if you have a urinary control problem. Talk with your doctor about treatment.

Call to action: What healthy hydration habit(s) will you intentionally commit to today?

Close your eyes. Think about the month of July. What do you see? Fireworks bursting in spirals of color high up in the dark sky. What do you smell? Chlorine from the pool as you climb up top the water slide. What do you feel? A roughness in your hands as you grasp the old tire swing rope tied to the tree in your front yard and the dirt squelching between your bare toes before you pull back to swing. What do you taste? The cool sweet, cherry flavor of a popsicle melting in your hand while you wait for the hotdogs to come off the grill. What do you hear? Lawn mowers going in the neighbors yard, friends calling your name from the driveway saying it's time to go play ball in the sandlot.

The summer often brings back nostalgic memories of days long gone. After all, for many years, July meant long hot days with nothing to do but play outside. Now, it too often means nothing but more monotonous days of work. For adults, three joyous months of summer vacation is a thing of the past. But that doesn't mean we can't remember the good old times.

Here at HWB this July we have memories in the making of our very own as we celebrate a very significant Birthday. We want to light up the sky in celebration.

Mary B. is celebrating "100" years. Mary reminisces about her life and she has many things to celebrate. As she looks back on her life, she realizes that she has had the opportunity of enjoying 77 years of marriage to her since past husband Clarence. She has 2 amazing children one she lost her daughter Barbara to cancer a year ago April. Her son Terry to whom she cherishes, he is here for her on a daily basis. She has 2 wonderful grandchildren. Her greatest accomplishments are her family. When asked what the secret to her success is and she says "Take each day as it comes and try to do what's right." "Happy Birthday Mary".
